NOTE TO PARENTS AND EDUCATORS

Dear parents and educators,

You have just acquired the first title in the Diroo series: Diroo & the Mystery of Easter Island. Here are some important notes to take into account to get the best out of the book and Cd-Rom of interactive games.

Relationship between the book and the Cd-Rom:

To understand the games, first it's important to check the book, and also keep the book open as a reference while you are running the Cd-Rom. There are lots of clues as well as a 'sources' section at the end of the book to help a child identify and choose the right resources to help them manage the tests.

You will have to refer often to the book to understand how to use the Cd-Rom. The literary support (the book) and the software (the Cd-Rom) are inseparable if you don't want to lose the thread of the story.

The accompanying book is not an instruction manual, but rather a guide in which you can find information which is not on the Cd-Rom.

The parent/educator child relationship:

This product supports the parent/educator child bond. The parent/educator is encouraged from the beginning to guide children.

The parent/educator is strongly encouraged to explore all the fantastic aspects of the story, to stimulate imagination and creativity in children: among other things, the mixtures of animals from which bizarre people are formed, and the mixtures of fruits and vegetables from which the magic foods are formed.

Diroo's universe is rich in senses. This part may be difficult for a child to understand. The parent/educator is asked to help them better comprehend both the sense of what is happening and sensitize them to the varied values brought to light.

A rich content, with the scent of discovery:

The product puts emphasis on research, as well as cultural and social exploration. Not being based only on the acquisition of material objects that reward them for their efforts, the main goal is that the child develops a taste for finding out things for themselves.

There is no one perfect way to explore the Cd-Rom. The child can as it pleases, discover different games without having to follow a pre-ordained path. He can pinpoint the different places he wants to find in the book or he can play around in the Cd-Rom according to the game and levels at which he wants to begin.

As a companion to this adventure, we hope you will dive in along with your children into the games world and fabulous quest that is Diroo and Easter Island.

We really believe in our product!

On behalf of the Diroo team,

Hélène Bécard
